Biography of Charles Allan Winter

Charles Allan Winter was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, October 1869. His father, Alfred Allan Winter, came to the United States from England at the age of three years. His mother, Fannie Amelia (Ramsley) Winter, was born in Piermont, New York. The Ramsley family was among the earliest settlers of Newark, New Jersey. Four children were born to the couple, Charles was their first.

While Charles was an infant, the Winter family moved to Dayton, Kentucky, a suburb of Cincinnati. Charles attended public school until the age of 12 years. After leaving school he was employed by a cousin, John Ramsley who conducted a confectionary establishment in Cincinnati. At the age of 15 he entered the Cincinnati Art Academy as a student, mornings only, continuing to work afternoons at Ramsley’s. He was able to attend the art academy only part time, some of the time the night session only, for seven years or until he was 22. The next two years he attended both the day and night sessions. His teachers included Vincent Nowottny, Lewis Lutz, and Thomas S. Noble.

In 1894 Charles won a foreign scholarship competition given by the art academy with which he traveled abroad for three years to Paris, France. Tuition and all personal expenses were covered by the scholarship. At the Académie Julian he studied under Adolphe-William Bouguereau and Gabriel Ferrier. He spent eight months of the three year scholarship in Rome, Italy.

At the completion of the three years, Charles prolonged his stay in Europe until he received an invitation to teach a portrait class at the St. Louis School of Fine Art, Missouri, where he remained for three years.

In 1901 Charles moved to New York and took a studio at 8 East 59th Street, where he lived when he married Alice Mary Beach on January 1, 1904.

Charles died in 1942.

Biography of Alice Beach Winter

Alice Mary Beach was born in Green Ridge, Missouri, March 22, 1877 to Edgar Rice and Frances Emeline Beach. Her father was an editor on the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. She was born into a family mainly of writers and actors. At age five she was copying pictures from magazines and books.

Alice began her formal studies at the St. Louis School of Fine Art in 1892. She was 14 years old, the youngest pupil at the time. She worked after hours at the school to pay tuition when she was 16 and 17.

Alice graduated in 1898, coincidentally the same year Charles entered the school as instructor. She traveled to New York where she spent one full season at the Art Students’ League, studying with John Twachtman, Joseph DeCamp, and George deForest Brush.
Alice reunited with Charles in New York and the couple was married in 1904. Together they occupied their 59th Street studio where they spent 30 years working on their paintings and illustrations. During this time they met many well-known artists of their day – John Sloan, Robert Henri, George Bellows and Paul Tietjens.

In 1912 Alice and Charles joined with other writers and artists in New York, such as Max Eastman, John Sloan and Art Young, to establish The Masses as a radical magazine. She later became the magazine's art editor and was responsible for several of its front covers.

In 1914 Charles and Alice began summering in Gloucester, Massachusetts. In 1922 they built a studio house at 134 Mt. Pleasant Avenue. There they socialized with notable artists such John Sloan, Robert Henri, Leon Kroll, Aldro T. Hibbard, W. Lester Stevens, Jane Peterson and William Glackens. Days were spent painting on location and evenings were filled with talks of artistic technique and trends.

Charles and Alice settled as full-time residents of their Massachusetts home in 1931, where they became instrumental teachers in the artists’ community.

Alice Beach Winter died in 1970.
